

Welcome to InterContinental® Bora Bora Resort & Thalasso Spa

ENVIRONMENT

To meet the major challenges of the 21st century and the challenges facing the world, the InterContinental® hotels in French Polynesia have been committed for many years to a sustainable and responsible tourism approach. This vision is in the DNA of the properties and is reflected in the path of sustainable development through environmental, cultural and social themes.

Each property deploys a strategy that is divided into 3 axes: reducing environmental impact, protecting culture and biodiversity and supporting communities. To monitor their progress, our hotels use GreenView, which segments CSR performance.

The InterContinental® Bora Bora Resort & Thalasso Spa works to limit its carbon footprint through numerous actions related to energy and waste management:

- Performance monitoring in water, energy and waste management
- Continuous progress towards 100% LED in order to reduce energy consumption linked to lighting
- Regulation of air conditioning use in bedrooms to save energy
- Flight against single-use plastic: replacement of plastic straws with pasta straws and bathroom samples with dispensers of COSMOS natural certified shower gel, shampoo and conditioner. COSMOS natural is a label that guarantees the use of healthy, organic components that are good for the body and the environment.
- Water bottling facility on site in order to limit waste linked to the consumption of bottled water
- Creation of an organic garden with use of permaculture methods, in order to limit waste and pollution linked to food packaging and transport
- Elimination of all single-use plastics by 2022

The InterContinental® Bora Bora Resort & Thalasso Spa highlights local biodiversity and Polynesian culture:

- Use of Biorock technology to allow coral growth by electrolysis
- Highlight of Polynesian culture through architecture, uniforms and language, as well as numerous Polynesian shows featuring local music and dance groups
- Traditional activities available for guests, such as raw fish preparation, palm weaving, and ways to wear the pareo

The InterContinental® Bora Bora Resort & Thalasso Spa strives to have a positive impact on the local community through several partnerships and events organized jointly with local partners:

- Espace Bleu, which creates coral cuttings, ensures the sustainability of the hotel's cutting tables and educates customers
- Participation in Bora Bora's inter-hotel sports competitions
- Bora Bora lagoon cleaning organized annually by the hotel during the European Waste Reduction Week with all the economic actors of the island and the municipality of Bora Bora
- The Heiva, a Polynesian dance competition in which the hotel participates and for which the hotel provides its support
- The Va'a association, set up by the hotel, which encourages employees to get involved in local sporting life

All these actions are part of our approach which aims to make tourism more responsible, fully aware of its impact on the environment, staff, visitors and local communities.
